

Building Your Website

Website creation can take place within one day if given the correct tools. Building a website can be quite frustrating; however, with the correct knowledge, computer skills, and research, hosting organizations have made this process attractive to business owners with a minimum budget. Below you will find a "point of reference" or "starting point" that could help you begin the process.

1. Organizational Synopsis:

- Who are your clients?

- Where is, the population will you offer the service or product?

- How will this service or product be provided?

2. Website Creation:

- What is the budget for your website? _____

- Website Domain Name(s) _____

Note: (This should be a presentation of your business however, keep in mind that the domain name should not be to excessive. Why? People make mistakes typing; you want the client to have easy access to learn more about your organization)

Note: (This maybe be a good time to consider if you want to purchase additional domain names related to your business) WHY? So that your organization will hold that domain name(s) for future projects)

- What would you like the tone or mood of your website to reflect?

Note: Colors affect how you want the end-user (client) to view your organization. Remember, your website is your first impression.

- What visual connection(s) would you like to use on your website:

- Graphics _____
- Animation _____
- Video _____
- Music _____

- Who will host your website (Go, Daddy, Wix, Yahoo, etc.)

- What information would you like on your website?

- Will you take payments or registrations on your website? Yes _____ No _____

Maybe: _____

- List the content you currently have for the website?

- What timeframe do you need this website completed? _____

- Do you have someone who can maintain the website? Yes _____ No _____

My Message:

Remember, your website is the first contact many individuals (clients) or grounds will be introduced to your services or products. The cliché rings true, "first impressions are everything," so make them count.
